Author's Notes:
Day ten of the thirty-day drabble challenge! I\'m sorry if the whole story arc is dragging for people, I swear it\'s going somewhere!

Geddy's voice is silver in the moonlight. I'm not a poetic guy, normally (why can't those jerks just say what they mean?), but he makes me feel like writing sonnets or stanzas or whatever the hell they are. It's late at night, we just finished a gig, and we're sitting together in my car, smoking. He's talking about some argument or another he had with his mom, but to tell you the truth, I'm too distracted by the beautiful sounds to pay attention to the words. It would be so easy to reach over and kiss him. But I don't.
